2. "Chemical fertilizers manufactured in China form only a minute part of Chinese requirements for fertilizers. The greater part of fertilizers used in China is still human excrement collected from cities and towns and junked or carted to "pools" located in farming areas and transferred from there as needed to the crops. The present Government is encouraging the use of chemical fertilizers for the large tonnage crops such as rice, wheat, etc., and have gone to the extent of making loans to farmers to enable them to purchase chemical fertilizers. Most of the chemical fertilizer consumed is imported [REDACTED]"
